

Intellectual Freedom Committee – 17
September 2007

Since I was unable to find a copy of the Policies Handbook for the Intellectual Freedom Committee I worked on a draft and submitted it to Kirsten Baesler for her review. In the process, I did uncover the North Dakota Intellectual Freedom Handbook For Libraries which was published in 1985. It has not been revised since then. I highly recommend that the Intellectual Freedom Committee take a look at this document and revise it to reflect the changes in libraries and privacy that have taken place since then.

I also received communication from Jonathon Kelley of ALA regarding the resolution on the use and abuse of National Security Letters. I recommend this resolution be passed by NDLA and many of the other states have already acted on this.
